

a roughness of about 220 nm. However, optical components typically require reflecting surfaces with a roughness less than about 50 nm.